Best website to learn korean free

Photo Courtesy: @Microsoft365/Twitter When you've got stacks of data to organize, you need a spreadsheet that is up to the challenge. As part of the Microsoft Office suite, Excel is one of the most popular options — and for good reason. Microsoft packs a lot of computing power into its Office products, but all that power won't do you any good if you don't know how to use it. Before you stress about learning a whole new program, remember that Excel wouldn't be hugely popular with both companies and individuals, including students, if it was difficult to learn. Besides guidance and tutorials that are available straight from Microsoft, the internet offers a lot of free guidance to help you learn how to use Excel and other Office programs. Let's take a look at a few good options to get you started.Look for Step-by-Step YouTube VideosThere's no doubt about it — YouTube is a powerhouse when it comes to finding tutorials for almost anything, and that includes mastering Excel. The best perk of learning something new on YouTube is you can visually see the steps and follow along without relying on written instructions that might not make sense. It's a great site to find Excel videos featuring everything from quick answers for completing a specific task to full tutorials on all the key elements of the program. Photo Courtesy: YouTube The only downside is that absolutely anyone can make and post YouTube videos, which means some creators will be far from experts. Be sure to look for videos with lots of views and likes and skim the comments at the bottom. You also want to make sure it's a recent video with instructions for your version of Excel. The general look and quality of the video may provide a clue to the overall quality as well, although some very talented software gurus aren't great videographers. Visit GCFLearnFree.org Another great source of beginner Excel training, the GCFLearnFree.org site offers easy-to-follow, step-by-step tutorials to help you do everything from enter simple columns of data to complete sheets filled with complex calculations. By the time you finish the free training, you will be able to use the full collection of functions, create charts and more. The tutorial takes you through everything you need to know one step at a time. Finally, you can bookmark pages to quickly access Excel Tips and MS Excel formulas. Photo Courtesy: @Microsoft365/Twitter Don't Forget About Microsoft Office Help Microsoft Office has a support website designed to help you figure out how to do specific tasks. It also includes broader Excel training for beginners and provides answers to specific questions. If you're wondering how to create a work planning template or you need to create a monthly expense sheet, Microsoft offers all these answers and more from inside the Excel program. Just click the Help option on the top menu bar or look for the question mark to get answers to common questions. Photo Courtesy: @Microsoft365/Twitter Expand Your Skills with ExcelJet Once you master the basics of Excel, you can take advantage of ExcelJet to make working in the program even easier. The comprehensive website offers training videos, formulas and keyboard shortcuts that reduce the amount of time it takes to do pretty much everything. In fact, the main page for ExcelJet features more than 200 shortcuts for use in Excel in Windows. A link clearly labeled at the top takes you to Excel shortcuts on the Mac as well. Photo Courtesy: @Microsoft365/Twitter Take Tutoring Classes You should never feel like Excel is a program you can't learn. If you start small and simply tackle one new task at a time, the sky is the limit on learning this efficient spreadsheet software with minimal stress. If you still feel like you're struggling after using all these free resources, you can look for Microsoft Excel tutoring classes in your area, but keep in mind that you probably won't find free options. In some areas, public libraries offer free classes for different types of software. Additionally, if you're a student, your college may offer free software tutorials. Photo Courtesy: @Microsoft365/Twitter MORE FROM QUESTIONSANSWERED.NET When you start learning Korean, trying to find the right online resources can be overwhelming. Which one should you choose? In this list, I'm covering the top websites for learning Korean that you'll need along your journey to mastering the language. Contents Memrise Beginner While Memrise isn't exclusively a Korean study site, it has a ton of Korean sections from which to choose. If you're an absolute beginner who still needs to learn Hangul, head here to begin learning pronunciation. Choose "Courses," go to "Korean" and search for "A Lesson Hangul." Start practicing and listening to the sounds. Using multiple-choice quizzes, you'll learn the alphabet and even vocabulary words in no time. FluentU Beginner-Advanced The FluentU program uses authentic Korean videos for an immersive learning experience. The program's library includes a wide variety of contemporary videos featuring native Korean speakers. This means you'll be able to experience modern Korean as it's spoken today in a variety of contexts, such as music videos, commercials, sketch comedy, inspirational talks and more. Every video is equipped with interactive captions in English and Korean, which provide you with contextual definitions without leaving the video. You can toggle these on or off to fit your needs and save new words to personalized flashcards. Personalized, multimedia quizzes help you study new words from your flashcard list as well as after each video. Talking2Koreans Beginner Prefer to study from a textbook? Talking2Korean might just be for you. What began as language activities for a popular language textbook in Australian universities eventually blossomed into a couple of textbooks. The professors continuously revised their content based on ongoing student feedback to make their dialogues as realistic as possible. They did this to get their students to speak to each other immediately and in a natural manner, instead of having them base their learning on traditional polite speech. Talking2Koreans has mostly free resources, including a couple of eBooks, audio files, vocab lists and self-tests. The textbook "Strategies for Communicating in Korean" can also be found on Amazon. Go! Billy Korean Beginner Although Billy began his journey back in 2005 and now lives in South Korea, he still considers himself to be a student of the language. Compared to native Korean speakers, Billy has a unique perspective on learning the language. Therefore, he's able to explain complex grammar forms in terms that native English speakers will understand. Go! Billy Korean is a great place to start since it's filled with approachable and entertaining content on language, lifestyle and travel. In addition to the website, you can check out his series of books called "Korean Made Simple," available in print and eBook formats. You may also download them as audiobooks for free. Sejong Korean Beginner-Intermediate King Sejong Institute was established by the South Korean government and is now a brand name of Korean language institutes in South Korea and beyond. This agency is all about spreading Korean language education and culture all over the world. Fun fact: The institution was named after the inventor of Hangul! One of the best parts of this website is the structure of their videos. Concepts are explained in Korean rather than English to enhance your listening skills, immersing you in the language. This can be intimidating for a beginner, but don't worry—the videos are equipped with English subtitles. And in case you aren't a native English speaker, or are fluent in any other languages, other language subtitle options are available. KoreanClass101 Beginner-Advanced While many of its resources require a paid plan, this site has a ton of free material to begin learning basic vocabulary and even phrases. One fun feature is its vocabulary lists, which are often updated for the holidays. The free material mainly uses audio to teach you. Lesson PDFs, reviews, dialogue audio and interactive learning features are available with a membership only. Either way, it's excellent for listening practice. Dom & Hyo Beginner-Intermediate This site is best for beginners who want to learn with colorful illustrations. Dom is an ESL teacher in Korea and an active student. His wife, Hyo, is a native Korean who can double-check his work, so you know you're getting accurate graphics. His comics are fun and easy. They're great to save and have on hand for quick reference. He also has comics describing daily Korean life, which are in both English and Korean. You can practice your reading comprehension here as your level gets more advanced. Cyber University of Korea: Quick Korean Beginner-Intermediate For those who crave a bit more of an academic setting, I'd recommend the Cyber University of Korea's own free online course, "Quick Korean." While I wouldn't recommend it for an absolute beginner, if you're at a stage where you want to move beyond basic vocabulary words, this is for you. Talk to Me in Korean Intermediate-Advanced Easily one of the most popular online Korean resources, Talk to Me in Korean is an awesome program with native Korean speakers who really understand how to break down more difficult grammar points. It's mainly a podcast, but each lesson comes with a PDF of the lesson as well (or you can buy the workbooks in a bundle). While I love TTMK and listen to the podcasts, I do warn it's not for a beginner. It's best to completely know Hangul and build up a vocabulary list before you dive in. How to Study Korean Intermediate-Advanced This site is an excellent resource for those who prefer more reading and writing versus listening. It's thoroughly organized into units. With each lesson, they introduce you to new vocabulary before thoroughly explaining a grammar point. They then provide multiple sample sentences for every situation to help you practice it. I noticed that when I was studying Korean and needed to search for clarification, this is the site that would pop up and be the most useful. GLOSS Korean Advanced The Global Language Online Support System (GLOSS) is actually a product of the Defense Language Institute (DLI), part of the United States Department of Defense (DoD). One of its main objectives is training American personnel in foreign languages, and Korean is one of them. GLOSS Korean is definitely for the more advanced learner as it bases its lessons off of real material like newspapers or television shows to really ensure fluency. This is also great if you want more serious reading to test your comprehension. Naver or Daum Webtoons Advanced Webtoons are an incredibly popular form of entertainment in Korea for all ages. If you prefer something more lighthearted, start scrolling through the hundreds of webtoons available on Korea's two main search platforms, Naver and Daum. Important to note: Webtoons are designed more for mobile devices than your laptop. Naver or Daum Blogs Advanced Another resource to use is the multitude of blogs on these same platforms. Look for topics that interest you and change the search to (blog). You'll be able to find something that interests you and get an understanding of how Koreans might write or speak. This is great to pair with the more formal GLOSS, as you'll come to understand the way a typical Korean speaks. Study Tips for Making the Most of Learning Korean Online Make a schedule and stick to it. If you enrolled in (and paid good money for) a course that holds class every Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., how often would you miss class? I'm betting you'd have next to perfect attendance. The same should go for online learning. I highly recommend setting aside about an hour of study each night to learn Korean with websites. And yes, at a certain level, watching your favorite Korean movie, whether you're renting or using Netflix, totally counts. Keep a notebook. Nothing helps you remember how to do something more than physically writing it down, especially if you need to learn Hangul, the Korean alphabet. Oftentimes, you may have the option of doing little exercises. Either print them out or use your notebook to write down your answers. Find somewhere you can talk. You need to be able to repeat after the virtual teachers at some point or sound out new vocabulary. Make sure you have a space where you can do this. Use something to warm up your screen. Huh? Okay, hear me out. Don't your eyes get tired after staring at a screen for too long? Mine certainly do. Downloading software or using a plugin that "warms" up the blue screen will make studying and reading online much easier. I prefer f.lux, but there are quite a few free, safe options out there. This is going to especially help if you schedule your hour later in the evening. Well, there you have it! A collection of amazing websites for learning Korean to bring you from total beginner to fluent speaker. These sites will give you a range of options for whichever part of language learning you want to focus on—listening, writing, speaking or reading. (good luck)! Samantha is a freelancer and travel blogger. She majored in Spanish as an undergraduate and taught English in Korea for two years while studying the language. Check out her adventures over at There She Goes Again.
